

STEVE YU, MD

FEMALE HEALTH SPECIALIST
MEDICAL DOCTOR

What is your company and what makes it unique?

We provide minimally invasive gynecologic surgery. Minimally invasive refers to using very small incisions on the skin, which replaces traditional large invasive approaches. Using the latest techniques through a small fiberoptic video camera, we provide treatment options for women with fibroids and urinary incontinence. We also provide vaginal rejuvenation.

How/when did you break into the industry?

In 2004 after medical school, most gynecologic surgeons were still performing complicated surgeries through a large abdominal incision. With the advances in laparoscopic and robotic surgery, I started to perform complicated surgeries minimally invasive, which was novel even in Los Angeles. I immediately became a strong proponent of minimally invasive surgery after I noticed that my patients had less postoperative pain, much easier recovery, and significantly less scarring.

What does being a Modern Man mean to you?

A Modern Man means being progressive, innovative and pragmatic. This is the same personal success criteria that allow a surgeon to thrive in the modern era.

What are the keys to your success?

Having fresh solutions to age-old problems. I still possess the same grit that got me through college, graduate school, medical school and residency. Lastly, and probably most importantly, I love what I do.

Any exciting projects forthcoming?

I have several media-related projects, such as Women's Health Podcasts and TV exposure. I am also joining forces with a surgical device company called Hologic. We are further advancing the minimally invasive fibroid treatment options for patients by educating and training physicians across the nation in a new technique called Accessa - radio-frequency ablation of fibroids.
